CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

1958

Mr. ALLOTT. Mr. President, I am very happy to hear the Senator from Montana, who is not only my distinguished colleague in the Senate, but my very good friend, speak in this manner, because I believe that, as those of us on this side of the aisle joined with Senators on the other side of the aisle to put through Alaskan statehood, so should we do so this year with respect to Hawaii.

I think there should be placed in the RECORD at this point the reason why I made the statement I did and the remarks that caused me to make it. I should like to quote from the statement by Mr. McCORMACK in the House of Representatives as it appears in the RECORD of yesterday, at page 12077. He said, among other things:

I am particularly pleased that Alaska's admission was by a Democratic-controlled Congress.

Then appears another paragraph, following which he said:

While personally I wish both could have been admitted at the same time, I am confident Hawaii's case will be acted upon early in the coming 86th Congress. The best chances of Hawaii's admission will be if the next Congress is Democratic. At the present time it is quite evident that both branches of the Congress will be Democratic, and by sharply increased majorities.

This will insure to the benefit of Hawaii. I have always felt that Hawaii's case was a strong one and a just one. Hawaii possesses every element for its admission as a State of the Union. I repeat, with the next Congress Democratic, I look forward with confidence to Hawaii's success, and the dreams and hopes of her people will materialize.

He continued in the same vein.

For many years I had very strong reservations personally about the admission of both Alaska and Hawaii to statehood. It was only after studying the question at great length that I decided not only one, but both Territories, deserve admission to statehood.

It was for a long time supposed that if Alaska were admitted to statehood her 1 Representative in the House of Representatives and her 2 Senators would be Democratic, and it was supposed for a long time that the reverse would be true if Hawaii were admitted to statehood. I personally do not believe anybody but the good God above us, who sees and watches our acts, knows what will happen in the elections. I can remember with great pain the election of 1948, when a Republican candidate thought for sure he was going to be elected to the presidency. I remember my own campaign for the Senate, in which almost everybody was sure my opponent would be the victor. So we cannot be certain about such matters, but of one thing I am sure: If we approach the question on a bipartisan basis, those who come to the Congress, whether from Alaska or from the sunny hills of Hawaii, will come as Americans. They will represent their States just as well, and with as much patriotism, dignity, and honor as any Member of the Senate can possibly do. I am looking forward to that. I am dreaming of the day when we shall add not simply 1 star to our flag, but 2 stars.

We must add the star of a Territory which I believe in many respects is far more advanced and more ready for statehood than Alaska, even though I now believe Alaska is ready for statehood.

So tonight, as we close this session, it is my sincere hope the majority leader and the acting majority leader will see fit to call up the Hawaiian statehood bill. It will most certainly be a very great shock and a very great blow to the people of Hawaii—it will be a shock to the peoples of the Asiatic countries—if we do not admit into our Union as a State that great Territory lying West of us, the Territory which absorbed the first great shock of World War II.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I join with the Senator from Colorado in what he has just said, and express the hope also that it will be bipartisan support which will bring Hawaii's case for statehood before the Senate. However, I believe we ought to be practical and realize that today is July 10. It might well be that by August 10 we will have adjourned the present session of Congress. So I express the hope that as soon as possible in the 86th Congress, whether it be Republican or Democrat, the issue of Hawaiian statehood will be before this body for consideration.
